

Josh Thurman

Josh Thurman, a native of Franklin, KY, has built a rich and varied career in agriculture, gaining experience across multiple facets of the industry. His journey began with early mornings milking cows on a dairy farm and working on his family's hay farm while harvesting countless acres of tobacco. After attending Western Kentucky University, Josh returned to a row crop operation in Schochoh, KY, which eventually led to a role at Miles Farm Supply. There, he transitioned from treating seed to working as a consultant in Owensboro, KY.

Josh later moved back to Franklin to manage Schochoh Crop Service before spending nine years consulting at Agriserve Crop Management. Each step in his career has been invaluable, laying the foundation for his next endeavor—founding Clearpoint Ag Solutions, his own consulting firm.

Through Clearpoint Ag Solutions, Josh combines his respect for traditional agricultural practices with a drive to innovate and unlock the untapped potential of the land. Guided by faith and his commitment to stewardship, he continually seeks to learn from those who came before while exploring new ways to help the land flourish for future generations.